

S. Daniel Johnson

President

Dan Johnson assumed responsibility as president for General Dynamics Information Technology, a business unit of General Dynamics, in April 2008.

As president, Mr. Johnson leads a diverse organization of 17,000 professionals that provides information technology (IT), systems engineering, professional services and simulation and training to customers in the defense, intelligence, homeland security, health, federal civilian government and commercial sectors.

From June 2006 to April 2008, Mr. Johnson served as executive vice president and chief operating officer (COO) of General Dynamics Information Technology where he was responsible for the day-to-day operations of the organization. In 2003, Mr. Johnson assumed responsibility as COO of Anteon Corporation and was responsible for a 9,000 person organization providing systems integration and systems engineering services to federal government customers. As COO, Mr. Johnson was instrumental in the growth of Anteon from a $1 billion public company in 2003 to $1.5 billion in 2005, and its acquisition by General Dynamics.

In 1997, Mr. Johnson assumed responsibility for all government business for BearingPoint, Inc., a national business unit of approximately 3,000 personnel serving federal, state and local, university, and health care customers. He served in that role until 2003.

After leaving the U.S. Navy in 1975, Mr. Johnson began his consulting career with KPMG, providing project management and systems acquisition services to Navy weapons systems acquisition programs. He progressed through increasing positions of leadership and responsibility, becoming head of all Navy programs, and eventually leading all Department of Defense consulting. Customers spanned headquarters, field site, and laboratory components of the U.S. Army, Navy and Air Force. Functional specialties included acquisition planning, financial systems, Enterprise Resource Planning systems, and Internet integration.

Mr. Johnson graduated from the U.S. Naval Academy in 1969 and George Washington University in 1975. He served in the U.S. Navy from 1969 to 1975.
