JOHN D. THOMAS

Executive Vice President Chief Strategic Officer

John D. Thomas is an Executive Vice President and the Chief Strategic Officer of leidos. Thomas has responsibility for corporate strategy, mergers and acquisitions, government and legislative affairs and communications. Mr. Thomas was part of SAIC prior to the separation when he became an officer of leidos.

At SAIC Thomas served as acting president of the National Security Sector during early 2013 following his assignment as general manager of the Integrated Systems Business Unit, a CMMI-Development Maturity Level 3 and ISO 9001 certified organization that focused on engineering and software development for intelligence and information systems including biometrics and electronic security systems supporting a wide range of intelligence and defense customers. He previously led the Operations, Intelligence and Security Business Unit that provided support to the Combatant Commands, Military Services, the Defense Intelligence Agency and the Department of Homeland Security.

Prior to joining SAIC he served as an active duty Army Officer retiring as a Major General. He commanded the two largest intelligence organizations in the Army, the Army Intelligence Center at Ft. Huachuca and the Intelligence and Security Command at Ft. Belvoir. Additionally, he served as the Associate Deputy Director of the National Security Agency and Deputy Chief of the Central Security Service.

Mr. Thomas holds a bachelor's degree from Wilkes University and a master's degree from the University of Southern California. Additionally, he graduated from the National War College, the Advanced Management Program of the University of Chicago, the Center for Creative Leadership and Harvard University Program for Senior Executives in National and International Security. He serves on the advisory committee for the University of Virginia's Systems and Information Engineering Department and the board of directors of the Maryland Business Roundtable for Education.

