

Nick Martin is an educator, technologist, and social entrepreneur with over ten years of experience. He is the founder and CEO of TechChange, a Washington DC-based social enterprise that provides online training for social change. The TechChange model for technology training has been featured in the New York Times, Forbes, Economist, Fast Company and more. Nick is a PopTech Social Innovation Fellow (2013), an Ariane de Rothschild Fellow (2014), and an International Youth Foundation Global Fellow (2009). He is also an adjunct faculty member at Georgetown and Columbia Universities where he teaches graduate courses on topics like: Technology for International Crisis Response, and Mobile Phones for International Development. Nick is on the board of PopTech. He received his BA with honors from Swarthmore College and holds an MA in Peace Education from the United Nations University for Peace (UPEACE).